

Contents

Prologue

Chapter 1

Introduction

Why love songs?
Love and evolution: is love hardwired?
Culture, civilization and the emergence of dyadic relationships
The love song, and what it tells us about the origin of romantic love and monogamy
When did love and love songs emerge and why? a new proposal

Chapter 2

“I Want You, I Want You, I Waaaaant You...”: Love and Sex

The love song: a response to the sex taboo
Between romantic love and sexual lust
Human sex, ape sex, and romantic love
The love song, sexual inhibitions, and courtship
Sexual spectacle: the love song in fertility rites and festivals
A brief message about lonely hearts: individual love songs
Summary: love, sex, and taboo

Chapter 3

No Love Song, No Romance?

Life without love songs: case studies
The Pygmies
Sun people
Are love songs absent in most African cultures?
Babemba of Rhodesia, the Masai and Nandi, and the Shilluk
Absence of the love song in the Americas and its relation to sexual customs
Love songs in Papua New Guinea
Summary: why is the love song absent in some cultures while it thrives in others?

Chapter 4

Sexual Behaviour in Humans: From Multiple-Partner Unions to Pair-Bonding and Individual Marriage

Multiple-partner sexual unions in human culture
Polygynandrous mating and jealousy
Can pair-bonding be the original hominin model?
Partible paternity and multiple-partner sexual unions
Weakness and non-existence of marriage

Chapter 5

Sexuality in Social Species

Sex in chimpanzees and bonobos
Socially-living species and polygynandry
Group living, multiple sexual relations, and coordinated choruses
Choruses and birds
Chorusing birds: monogamous or promiscuous?
Multiple-partner sexuality and sperm competition
Multiple-partner sex, natural selection, cooperation, and altruism

Chapter 6

Sociality and the Origins of Sex

From individual to group model check

Chapter 7

“We Are Not Animals”: Problematisation of Sex in Human Culture

Incest taboo and genetic factors

Chapter 8

Sexual Frustration, Sexual Preoccupation, and Romantic Love

Postlude

Why Do We Feel Romantic Love Towards the Special One?